When these plans are consummated and made known every patriotic citizen of Fort Worth will consider himself a committee of one to paint the city a brilliantly beautiful carmine.

THAT Toxas should be well represented at the World's fair in Chicago is a fact universally acknowledged. THE pride that Texans feel in the state is a source of wonder to many Northern people, but when its immense resources, as yet only partially known, are presented, wonder ceases. Nothing can convince a man of the resources of a state, as seeing its products. For this reason the Columbian fair display should be a lavish one, carefully arranged and gotten up regardless of expense. The tide that leads on to fortune is at its flood and Texas should take every advantage

FORT WORTH DAILY GAZETTE. Kansas City, Omaha, St. Louis or Chicago. A hotel of this description would not only add greatly to Fort Worth's local interests, but would make it famous all over the South for having superior hotel accommodations. Fort Worth's natatorium is known far and wide and men often travel fifty to one hundred miles to spend Sunday at Fort Worth simply to enjoy the privileges of the baths. A first-class hotel, well managed, would cause Fort Worth to be made the stopping place for tourists and the headquorters of all coming to Texas for purposes of investment.

GERMANY'S GREAT SOLDIER. The death of Von Molke removes all ut one of a trio that has become famed in history, song and story, and whose names will be cherished as long as Teutonic blood flows in the veins of any living being. Wilhelm, the mighty emperor who made Germany the power she is to-day, has long since joined the innumerable caravan that marches on to the pale realms of shade. Bismarck, his trusty chancellor and true friend, the man of iron, still survives, towering aloft like a gigantle oak in a storm-wrecked forest yet who, too, must soon bow before the inexorable flat as the mighty conqueror. Von Moltke, the third of the great trio, died in the penitude of power, with his honors thick upon him. He was the idol of the army and the people. He valued war only for the peace it brought and the strengthening of Germany's position. His name has long been embalmed in one of the national songs, a monument more enduring than granite shaft or marble cenotaph. It will be long before Germany will know three men as great, or whose influence upon the destiny of the nation will be so potent as that of Wilhelm, Bismarck and Von Moltke.

BOILED DOWN.

The Waco Alliance meeting fulfilled to the letter the prediction made concerning it by THE GAZETTE a mouth ago. There was to be sure a deal of talk of one kind or another, but the official acts of the meeting were actually or virtually such as had been foretold.

The meeting was a special one called for a special purpose, and that not the organization of a third party as many supposed. True enough, a powerful effort was made to commit the meeting to a third party platform, but the promoters of that idea were principally fellows from other states, professional walking delegates who can only thrive A NEW YORK publication recently, by raising sheel and keeping it up.

There was nothing in the political situation at this time, no burning is dently been sadly neglected in its edu- sues to be met, and no elections imminent to call for a four days' session of the state Alliance. There certainly was no urgent need for indorsing the St. Louis platform and the sub-treasury plan, for that has already been done, and could easily wait until the regular August meeting for whatever reindorsing it might be thought to stand in

The object of the meeting was plainly a local one, veiled under the and the name of Fort Worth is the specious plea of the general good of the order, and instigated by a few of the leaders who wanted an official indorsement, both of their conduct durfrom Kansas to the gulf indicates a ing the late session of the legislature, great change in the trend of Trans- and of their sinister purposes and plans with reference to the present state administration.

The entire programme had been prepared beforehand, was cut and dried, and had no other object than the one mentioned. All else was but "leather and prunella," oratorical pyrotechnics intended to lend eclat and make the tout ensemble as imposing as possible.

The plain truth of the matter isand it should be known far and widethe meeting was designed for the express purpose of condemning the railread commission law recently enacted. That was the effect of the resolution condemning an appointive commission. If a man, Bob Ingersoll or any other, condemns a single clause of the Lord's Prayer, he in effect condemns it all. When you attack the most salient feature of a measure, that which gives it force and effect, there is no occasion for doubtless result in the raising of a assaulting the rest of it. Pull out the keystone, and where is your arch?

It should be noted and known of all that the first attack made on the commission law came from the Alliance; not that the Alliance is opposed to the law, not at all; but that it has been deceived under a false and specious plea by a few designing leaders into a covert and insideous attack on the law, the full meaning and significance of which the rank and file, who voted for the resolutions did not comprehend The resolutions were precisely such as the railroad people would themselves have written. But while the lobby that made the capital a health resort for itself during the winter was on hand watching closely the progress of the meeting, and dealing out compliment; and panegyries on the "able and logical" sub-treasury speeches made,no one supposes for an instant that it had anything to do with the framing of the resolutions or the conduct of the meeting. Perish the thought. Could men that only a few short months agorailed vehemently against the Alliance people as anarchists and wreckers, be found so soon bound up cheek by jowl with them in the fraternal bonds of

WHEELING, W. The following extracts from a letter received from Maj. G. A. Powell, chief of the United States geo

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 27, 1891. 5
Hon, N. B. Scott, President of the Wheeling
Development Company, Wheeling, W. Va.: Sin-I have learned from Professor I. C. White of the University of Virginia that public spirited citizens of Wheeling, having failed of financial success in the boring of a deep well, have dedicated the well to the purposes of science, and determined that it shall become in that way a success. Not only does this discrimination give me great personal satisfaction, but it will entitle you personal satisfaction, but it will entitle you to the gratitude and the high esteem of geologists and physicists of the world. If the well is carried down until it reaches carniferous limestone, it will a d an important measurement to geology and aid in guiding the future operations in boring for future accounts represent the property of the proper peology and and in guiding the Inture operations in boring for future economic purposes, not only in your own vicinity but in Ohio and Kentucky. It will also afford an opportunity practically unique for the determination of the laws for a temperature change beneath the surface of the earth. The ideal locality is one where a deep well. The ideal locality is one where a deep well penetrated an undisturbed horizontal strata and does not tap veins of water. These are peculiar characteristics of your well, and the combination has never been realized before. I am therefore very desirous to secure for science the best records attainable from observation of this well, and have detailed for this purpose Dr. William Hollock, a trained and experienced physicist, who will begin his preparatory work at once. Yours with preparatory vork at once. Yours with respect, J. W. Powell, Director.

The well in question has already been bored by a Wheeling gentleman to the depth of 4100 feet, and was started with the avowed intention of boring until oil or natural gas was found. NATIONAL EXECUTIVE BOARD OF THE UNITED MINE

Workers of America Concludes Its Session at Columbus, Ohlo-An Address Issued to Their Brethren,

COLUMBUS, ORIO, April 28.—The national executive board of the United mine workers of America concluded a session of several days this morning and adjourned. The meeting was called to hear a statement from the presidents of the state miners' organizations relative to the proposed strike on May 1 for the enforcement of an eight-hour labor day. The reports were almost unanimous against the movement. Various reasons were given why they could not enter upon a strike at this time. The result of the conference was an ad-

THE DENVER POISONING.

EXPERTS INVESTIGATING MRS. BARNABY'S DEATH.

Tell-Tale Bottle Which Held the Whisk of Which She Drank-Developments Expected Soon.

Special to the Caratte

DENVER, Col., April 28.—It will not be many days now before the public will know with absolute certainty the cause of the death of Mrs. Barnaby, in so far as the tests and anyalsis of chemists and dectors can go. At present the experts have little to say. They do not care to make a statement that future experiments may render unreliable, be it in ever so small a degree, but this may be said: unreliable, be it in ever so small a degree, but this may be said:
Professors Sewell and Hedden are to-day in possession of the bottle containing the whisky which Mrs. Barnaby drank, and also of the viscera of the deceased lady. Professor Sewell has resolved one conclusion already that may be deceased lady. Professor Sewell has reached one conclusion already that may be of value in ferreting out the person who sent Mrs. Barnaby the whisky. He does not think the arsenic was put in the whisky by a person ignorant of chemical principles. This he arrived at from the fact that no arsenic was in the dissolved. Nov bottle in the form of a precipitant. All had been dissolved. Now arsenic is bottle in the form of a precipitant. All had been dissolved. Now arsenic is very insoluble in whisky. The twelve ounces of liquor in the bottle would have sustained in solution but six grains of arsenic—not sufficient to produce fatal results. Accordingly whoever did the thing made use of an alkaloid, knowing that in such a solution any amount of arsenic could be discontinuous. lution any amount of arsenic could be dis solved. A potassium carbonate was made use of. This was betrayed by those who partook of the whisky by the taste. To Professor Sewell it is even more evident, for he has made chemical analysis of a portion of the bottle's contents. He has not yet completed his task. When all has not yet completed his task. When all is through by delicate scales he will de termine the exact amount of arsenic con Professor Hedden has the viscera of Mrs.
Barnaby in his charge. He obtained them
